THE FACTS: WHY PPD?

Postpartum depression is a form of depression following childbirth, which may include perinatal depression, postpartum depression (PPD), and postpartum psychosis (Ruybal et al., 2019).

In Canada, 23% of mothers who recently gave birth reported feelings of postpartum depression or an anxiety disorder (Statistics Canada, 2019).

There is a lack of data regarding the incidence and prevalence of postpartum depression in Ottawa, Ontario. This indicates a systematic gap that we are hoping to raise awareness about.

THE CURRENT SITUATION (-)

The situational assessment highlighted the following factors as a barrier for those living with postpartum depression:
- Pre-existing Mental Health Conditions
- Low-income
- System Navigation for Mental Health Resources
- Stigmatization of Postpartum Depression
- Cultural Barriers

THE CURRENT SITUATION (+)

Within the situational assessment, the following positive impacts were identified:
- Positive Social Media Posts
- Pre-existing Programs
- Support from the Community

PROGRAM INTERVENTIONS

A social media account titled, @PushPastPPD will serve as a platform for navigation of local resources. System navigation for mental health services is a barrier for many individuals.

Interactive infographics will be distributed on @PushPastPPD on social media platforms to promote resources available within the City of Ottawa highlighting pre-existing programs within the community.

A hashtag program will be initiated using #PushPastPPD to increase awareness of postpartum depression as a prevalent mental health issue in society through conversation promotion and further destigmatization.

PROGRAM FEASIBILITY

Economic
This program will be developed on social media, indicating it can be sustained over time and is financially viable for production within the City of Ottawa.

Technical & Operational
To successfully develop and launch this program, knowledge of graphic design and social media marketing will be required. Knowledgable staff, online access and community involvement will be required for the successful implementation of this program.

Ethical & Cultural
Target population assessments, including a media scan, indicate that the topic of PPD is present on some social media channels; by providing @PushPastPPD as a positive
